Truman's Sniping Continues

Northwest Hears Congress Assailed

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 11—President Truman will fly over the flood-devastated areas of the Pacific Northwest today to inspect damage wrought by a rampaging major river watershed which he insists Congress should give the nation power to control.

The chief executive, having delivered a succession of new verbal onslaughts on a "do-nothing" Congress, left here this morning to fly over the flood area to Salem, Ore.

There he was to make another address in a continuation of his red-hot pre-convention campaign for reelection.

At Portland, the President also will confer with the heads of government agencies in the Northwest to aid flood sufferers, on means of preventing in the future the high waters that have swept the populated areas along the Columbia river.

The President yesterday met Secretary of Interior Krug in Olympia. Krug accompanied on his speaking trip by motor to Bremerton, Seattle and Tacoma.

YESTERDAY, in four speeches, with no punches pulled, Mr. Truman set the pace for a furious campaign for reelection. As he has earlier on his transcontinental speaking tour, the President chose the 80th Congress as the target for attack.

He assailed the Congress in a major prepared speech in Seattle's half-filled Memorial Stadium.

Taft Lambastes 'Gallivanting' President's Talk

PHILADELPHIA, June 11—Sen. Robert Taft, (R) Ohio, today swung back at President Truman's "worst Congress" charge with an indictment of the administration's policies at home and toward Communism abroad.

In a speech before the Union League Club, Taft called Mr. Truman a "gallivanting President" with a 15-car train at the expense of the voters, who would create a nation completely regimented."

Taft said Congress should adjourn on its June 19 deadline. He asserted:

"There is little use of remaining here to face the vetoes of a man who does not understand the difference between American principles of free government and Communism, who does not understand the threat of totalitarian control."

Plans for a protest march on Washington were then suspended until the nematodes can prove they can deliver the vote.

But action on the nematode bill was just in time. We are faced with another potato surplus and there was danger the nematodes might beat the government to destroying the crop.

Under the law the government keeps the price of potatoes up while bawling the fact that food prices do not come down. This is what is known as the "over-normal-lunacy" policy.

Operators Seek Lockout Claim

WASHINGTON, June 11—A Knoxville, Tenn., coal operator came to John L. Lewis' defense today with the declaration that a Summer coal strike "is not contemplated or wanted" by the 400,000 miners.

H. K. Cook, claiming to represent over 500 independent operators producing some 14 million tons of coal annually, asserted that the present stalemate in the 1948 wage contract negotiations is caused by his industry colleagues.

The Tennessee mine owner—a participant in the court-ordered bargaining sessions trying to make a new contract to replace the pact expiring June 30—said: "In my opinion, the stalemate is presently caused by the asinine attitude that Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the national coal operators group, is taking on the freezing of the 1947 welfare fund account."

COOK ACCUSED his colleagues of "angling for a lock-out" in hopes of again boosting coal prices $1 a ton while the industry's profits already "are enormous and in no way correlated with the cost of production."

He also challenged the statement of Rep. Hartley, (R) N. J., that Lewis is not bargaining in good faith, asserting that the congressman "obviously is getting his information from biased sources."

Meantime, the United Mine Workers Journal blasted the soft coal operators' 1948 contract proposal as "an under-cover attempt to begin progressive liquidation of the UMW."

The journal asserted that with "the operators enjoying an open door to the National Labor Relations Board, injunctive processes in the court, and the Truman administration, the chances of fair appraisal and equitable determination of the issues appear remote."

Manual Labor Faces Solons

COLUMBUS, June 11—Columbus Councilmen Robert T. Oestreich and Henry A. Koontz will go to work on the city garbage and refuse collection trucks before they talk over a revised city budget to go into effect July 1.

But they won't be alone in their menial tasks. The remainder of the council will be working on street repairs, dead tree removal, police details, recreation activities and street lighting.

It's all part of a plan to give the councilmen a look at what the city income tax, approved Tuesday, has accomplished since the first of the year and what actually still needs to be done.

UN Is Facing Crucial Test As Zion War Guns Are Still

LAKE SUCCESS, June 11—The United Nations today begins a period of acid test, with Arab and Jewish guns pledged to silence for four weeks in obedience to the Security Council's Holy Land cease-fire resolution.

Success in halting Palestine hostilities for the period—and meanwhile arranging a permanent settlement—will increase tremendously the prestige and international authority of the world organization.

Collapse of the truce and peace efforts will, however, endanger the very foundations of the 58-nation body.

Observers believe that the truce will, at best, be shaky, since both Israel and the Arab states have let it be known that neither will tolerate the slightest violation by the other.

These observers say, however, that the supervisory machinery at the disposal of the UN mediator, Count Folke Bernadotte, will make it difficult for either side to make false accusations or evade its own obligations.

BERNADOTTE has at his disposal a staff of 68 United States, French and Belgian officers, plus a UN "little navy" of six patrol vessels to keep watch on all developments, plus 30 UN experts to assist in operating the truce.

The Security Council itself will give the cease-fire period a chance to get under way by deferring further consideration of the Palestine situation until Tuesday afternoon, barring an alert from Bernadotte.

An Arab Legionnaire was reported killed by Jewish fire near the Damascus gate in Jerusalem today one hour after the cease-fire became effective.

The report of the incident received at Amman, capital of Trans-Jordan, said that some irate Arabs are charging that the slaying constitutes Jewish violence of the truce.

Headquarters of the Arab League in Amman previously announced field reports saying that quiet prevails on all former battlefronts in the Holy Land.

An earlier telephoned message from the old city of Jerusalem said there were a few mortar exchanges during the night but that shooting had stopped this morning.

THE ISRAELI and Arab fighting forces in Palestine stilled their guns at 6 a. m. GMT (1 a. m. EST) at the start of a four-week truce.

Egyptian compliance with the edict was signified in the formal sounding of a cease-fire by army buglers at the historic citadel in Cairo.

The truce brought to a halt almost six months of Arab-Jewish communal strife, including 27 days of open warfare between Israeli and Arab armies.

Liquor Examiner Indicted In Shakedown Probe

COLUMBUS, June 11—A. E. Oppenheimer, chief permit examiner in the Ohio liquor department was under indictment today, charged with soliciting and accepting a $300 bribe from a Springfield tavern operator, Howard McCall, and soliciting a $2,300 bribe from a London hotel operator, Gilbert Shively.

Also indicted were Hugh A. Ruel, retired farmer, and Tracy Pack, taxicab company operator, both of Portsmouth.

Ruel is reported to be chairman of the Scioto County Republican executive committee and a delegate to the Republican presidential convention, pledged to Senator Taft.

Oppenheimer also was mentioned in the second indictment which charged the three men with soliciting bribes of $1,500 and $1,000 from Shively.

County Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett said he would divulge no more information on the indictments in the investigation of alleged shakedowns in the liquor department permit division. However, he added:

"These indictments by no means close the liquor probe. In the next three weeks, we (Continued on Page Two)

Columbia Cracks Another Dike

PORTLAND, June 11—The raging Columbia river broke through another dike just north of here early today, releasing flood waters over a rich district embracing the city's square-mile Columbia airport and other valuable properties.

All residents of the area already had been removed to escape the threatened renewed deluge.

Included in the area swept by the fresh flood waters, besides the airport, are four golf courses, hundreds of homes, numerous fertile truck gardens and the Troutdale aluminum plant.

Ohio Wallace-Backers Labeled As Communists

COLUMBUS, June 11—Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel charged today in a supreme court brief that some of the Ohio Wallace-for-President backers are Communists.

In an answer brief filed with the high court, Hummel said that his special investigator, George Houston, found from FBI and police files in Cleveland that three of the 10 men who signed the Wallace affidavits are members of the Communist Party.

A fourth attended secret meetings, and a fifth was a speaker at a Lenin memorial gathering in Cleveland last Jan. 18.

The alleged Communist members included Nathan Zahm of Cleveland, administrative director of the Ohio Wallace-for-President committee.

Zahm did not sign the anti-Communist affidavits filed with Hummel in an effort to qualify Wallace's third party in Ohio, Hummel added, but he was investigated because, as an attorney, he notarized the affidavits.

HOUSTON'S sworn statement declared that "Zahm is the brains behind the setup, but is not the top Communist in the Cleveland area."

Hummel had rejected the party's anti-sedition affidavit and the committee had appealed to the high court. Hummel's brief was an answer to that appeal.

Others named in the report included:

Dr. Calvin S. Hall, professor of languages at Western Reserve university in Cleveland, who allegedly delivered the

Power Failure Makes Fire Chief Hospital Aide

Circleville's fire chief, Talmer Wise, was pressed into service as a hospital aide Friday morning.

For nearly one hour and a half, Chief Wise was the main cog at Berger hospital as electric power failed. The fire department's portable power generator was handled by Chief Wise, allowing four minor surgery operations to be continued without interruption.

Charles Gilmore, manager of the local office of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co., said no injuries were reported in the Pickaway powerhouse north of this city when an oil circuit-breaker blew out.

The power failure began shortly after 9 a. m. and was not restored until 10:30 a. m., Gilmore said.

PITTSBURGH, June 11—Westinghouse Electric Corp. today offered 80,000 production employees a six percent wage increase plus one additional paid holiday.

In addition, Westinghouse proposed to inaugurate a "package" pension and insurance program, averaging about four cents an hour per worker.

Reds Set New Squeeze

Berlin Allied Council Is Target

BERLIN, June 11—The official Soviet Berlin newspaper indicated today that the Russians plan to disrupt the Berlin Kommandatura as the next step in their campaign to oust the Western Allies from the former German capital.

German reports said that Soviet occupation authorities have sealed the frontier between the Russian and Anglo-American occupation zones against German travelers.

The Kommandatura is the four-power inter-Allied body governing Berlin.

The newspaper, Tagliche Rundschau, attacking alleged French-American terrorism in Berlin, said that the "French and Americans ought not to forget that Berlin is situated in the Russian zone, whose population never will allow its erection into a center of Fascist suppression."

PARIS REPORTS yesterday said that Moscow is sending a member of the Politbureau, the supreme organ of the Soviet Communist Party, to take charge of the campaign to expel the Western Allies from Berlin.

The German reports said that the border closing took place late last night.

The British military government today halted issuance of inter-zonal passes pending clarification of the frontier situation.

An estimated 3,200 German war prisoners returned from France and Great Britain entered the Soviet zone this morning despite the pass ban.

Court Approves Casket-Opening

AKRON, June 11—Ernest Peterson of suburban Cuyahoga Heights has permission today to open a casket containing the body of his son, killed in action in the Pacific theatre.

Peterson obtained permission to open the casket from Summit County Common Pleas Judge V. D. Emmons in what is believed to be the first case of its kind in the country.

The son, Garret E., was a second lieutenant in the Army Air Forces and was lost in 1945 while a co-pilot of a C-46 which crashed while flying the Hump in India.

Peterson said he hoped to establish the identity with the aid of a dentist who had worked on his son's teeth. The body now is on its way from Hawaii.

House Cut Of ERP Funds Called 'Calculated Risk'

WASHINGTON, June 11—Secretary of State Marshall said today that House foreign aid cuts involve the United States in a "calculated risk of failure" for the global recovery program.

The secretary made his charge in testifying before the Senate appropriations committee in an appeal for restoration of the reduction.

Marshall singled out the House action in putting the appropriation for Western Europe on a 15-month basis instead of 12 months. He said this was "certainly the most confusing cut—the least apparent and yet the most real cut."

"With these reductions we are involved in a calculated risk of failure. I don't think we can afford to place the United States and Mr. Hoffman personally in a struggle that may ruin the whole program."

PAUL G. HOFFMAN, the Marshall Plan administrator, testified ahead of Marshall that it would be "most unwise and shortsighted" to reduce foreign assistance below the amount Congress previously authorized.

Marshall said that "the most serious aspect of the entire matter" is the psychological effect of the reduction upon the 16 countries which joined in the Marshall Plan despite Russia's opposition. He said:

Ohio Obscene Law Is Ruled As Illegal

CINCINNATI, June 11—Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge Stanley Struble has ruled part of Ohio's obscene literature law unconstitutional and declared:

"There is nothing unchaste or shameful in a woman disrobing."

His statement yesterday on a series of strip-tease pictures cleared Cincinnati News Dealer Oscar Lerner of a charge of possessing and selling obscene literature. Judge Struble's statement said:

"These front views, as well as the other views, are of God's own children as he made them in his own image. There can be no obscenity in God's handiwork."

The statement continued: "There is nothing distasteful to the eye in this strip tease act. This young woman has a nice face and form and she is nicely appressed. She is playing her trade in this act and she chose a clean act—a woman disrobing." Judge Struble added:

"Normal sex ideas are all right. Nature is aflame with sex ideas: The hoot of the owl, the coo of the dove, the blossoms of the flowers, plants and trees, the spawning of fish. Sex is the why and wherefore of life and living."

Danish Ship Hits Mine Off Jutland

350 Vacationists Aboard Vessel

COPENHAGEN, June 11—One hundred and fifty persons were killed today when a Danish coastal steamer laden with vacationists struck a mine off the East Jutland coast and sank.

Divers who probed into the torn hull of the SS Koebenhavn off Aalborg reported that many bodies are trapped in the wreckage.

The exact number who were drowned or killed by the force of the blast, which ended a joyous holiday cruise, was not ascertained many hours after the disaster.

A tragic picture of sudden death striking the Koebenhavn while many passengers were asleep was pieced together from survivors lying in hospitals, hotels and first-aid centers in Aalborg.

Some told of hearing the screams of people trapped behind jammed cabin doors. For a few moments something approaching panic swept the 1,669-ton ship. Men and women in various stages of undress jumped overboard into the oil-covered waters.

MANY WERE sucked under as the ship sank.

All passengers were believed to have been Scandinavians.

Unofficial reports said the ship had struck one of the magnetic mines which were sown by the hundreds in Scandinavian waters during World War II.

Five bodies, three of them those of women, already have been recovered, and officials of the United Shipping Co. owners of the steamer, said that 117 passengers and crew members remain missing.

They said that all persons aboard totaled 350.

Accounts of the tragedy indicated that the sinking may prove the biggest disaster in Danish maritime history.

Several of the passengers aboard the steamer were reported killed outright by the mine blast which injured many others when the mine exploded. Detonation of the mine amidships almost cut the vessel in two.

It sank almost immediately in shallow water almost 20 miles off the coast of Aalborg province in Kattegat strait. Only the smokestack and masts were reported above water after the vessel went down.

The crippled vessel sank within eight to 10 minutes after the (Continued on Page Two)

Trio Overcome By Fumes Here

Three Columbus people were treated for carbon monoxide poisoning Thursday night in Berger hospital after having been overcome in an auto passing through Circleville.

Those overcome were Mrs. John Cain, wife of the driver; her daughter, Frances, 6; and Luther Cain, 15, brother of the driver. The Cains live at 1512 Elliott street, Columbus.

At 10 p. m. Thursday the Cain auto pulled into Crites southend filling station for fuel. Cain, at the stop, for the first time noticed the inactivity of the rear seat occupants, and called for an ambulance.

Neither Cain nor another man, unidentified by Circleville police, was affected by the gas, which was believed admitted into the car by a leaking muffler. They were in the front seat.

The statement continued: "There is nothing distasteful to the eye in this strip tease act. This young woman has a nice face and form and she is nicely apparelled. She is playing her trade in this act and she chose a clean act—a woman disrobing." Judge Struble added:

"Normal sex ideas are all right. Nature is aflame with sex ideas: The hoot of the owl, the coo of the dove, the blossoms of the flowers, plants and trees, the spawning of fish. Sex is the why and wherefore of life and living."

Danish Ship Hits Mine Off Jutland

350 Vacationists Aboard Vessel

COPENHAGEN, June 11—One hundred and fifty persons were killed today when a Danish coastal steamer laden with vacationists struck a mine off the East Jutland coast and sank.

Divers who probed into the torn hull of the SS Koebenhavn off Aalborg reported that many bodies are trapped in the wreckage.

The exact number who were drowned or killed by the force of the blast, which ended a joyous holiday cruise, was not ascertained many hours after the disaster.

A tragic picture of sudden death striking the Koebenhavn while many passengers were asleep was pieced together from survivors lying in hospitals, hotels and first-aid centers in Aalborg.

Some told of hearing the screams of people trapped behind jammed cabin doors. For a few moments something approaching panic swept the 1,669-ton ship. Men and women in various stages of undress jumped overboard into the oil-covered waters.

MANY WERE sucked under as the ship sank.

All passengers were believed to have been Scandinavians.

Unofficial reports said the ship had struck one of the magnetic mines which were sown by the hundreds in Scandinavian waters during World War II.

Five bodies, three of them those of women, already have been recovered, and officials of the United Shipping Co. owners of the steamer, said that 117 passengers and crew members remain missing.

They said that all persons aboard totalled 350.

Accounts of the tragedy indicated that the sinking may prove the biggest disaster in Danish maritime history.

Several of the passengers aboard the steamer were reported killed outright by the mine blast which injured many others when the mine exploded. Detonation of the mine amidships almost cut the vessel in two.

It sank almost immediately in shallow water almost 20 miles off the coast of Aalborg province in Kattegat strait. Only the smokestack and masts were reported above water after the vessel went down.

The crippled vessel sank within eight to 10 minutes after the (Continued on Page Two)

Trio Overcome By Fumes Here

Three Columbus people were treated for carbon monoxide poisoning Thursday night in Berger hospital after having been overcome in an auto passing through Circleville.

Those overcome were Mrs. John Cain, wife of the driver; her daughter, Frances, 6; and Luther Cain, 15, brother of the driver. The Cains live at 1512 Elliott street, Columbus.

At 10 p. m. Thursday the Cain auto pulled into Crites south end filling station for fuel. Cain, at the stop, for the first time noticed the inactivity of the rear seat occupants, and called for an ambulance.

Neither Cain nor another man, unidentified by Circleville police, was affected by the gas, which was believed admitted into the car by a leaking muffler. They were in the front seat.

Panel Urges OK On Arms Power

WASHINGTON, June 11—The House foreign affairs committee has voted to renew the President's authority to arm American vessels in the event of the danger of war.

The committee urged the House to act quickly as the President's authority will expire July 1, unless renewed. The group held that the Navy should be given authority to meet future emergencies.

County's Dairy Income Cited

About 25 percent of Pickaway County farmers' income is derived from the dairy business, Perry Elsworth of the Ohio State University dairy extension service told Circleville Rotary Club members Thursday.

Speaking in behalf of the National June Dairy Month, Elsworth reported that 40 percent of all beef cattle going on the market today is from dairy herds.

He revealed that Ohio is one of the nation's leading dairy states, ranking ninth in production. He disclosed Pickaway County stands third in dairy income in the state.

In 1945, Pickaway County dairy farmers received approximately $1.5 million in dairy income, "and that was in the days of low prices," Elsworth declared.

um and in talks at Bremerton, Tacoma and Olympia.

Before nearly 10,000 persons gathered in nearby Tacoma, the President attacked the present national legislature as a "special interest Congress—working for the special interests" and with the lobbyists.

At midday yesterday 10,000 residents of the navy yard community of Bremerton heard the President accuse the Congress of being interested in the welfare of the rich and not of the poor.

His talk in Olympia last night climaxed the President's day-long series of oratorical salvos against the Congress. To a crowd jamming the streets of Washington's capital city, he said:

"I have been pouring it on them (the Congress) pretty heavily lately. Maybe they will take the hint and do something. I would be very happy if they do that. Of course, it would make a better campaign if they didn't."

"Then I am going to come out here and go all over the country and tell the people exactly what has taken place in the last three years. Then I am going to let the country know what has taken place in the last 12 years. Then I may tell them what took place 12 years before that."

"Then if you people want to continue the policies of the 80th Congress, that will be your funeral."

Lack Of Funds Delays Road Job

A shortage of funds in the Pickaway County engineer department Thursday caused county commissioners to postpone awarding of a contract to the Van Camp construction firm for resurfacing 31.3 miles of county roads.

The Van Camp bid of $31,837.40 was the only offer received by deadline Thursday noon, Auditor Fred L. Tipton revealed.

It was explained that County Engineer Henry T. McCrady's office holds sufficient money to pay the construction costs, but he feared running short of funds before the end of the year.

Brother Trio Gets Tonsils Out

"THERE is every sign that the President would return to the same soft policy toward Communism which was followed by his predecessor, the policy which placed Russia in the powerful position it occupies today, and introduced Communist influence into every labor union and government department."

Taft, accusing the President of "blackguarding Congress at every whistle station in the West," disputed Mr. Truman's assertion that Congress has failed to do anything about social legislation. Taft said:

"The Republicans have been in power a little over a year and have made extensive studies in every one of the fields of civil rights, housing, education and health, even if the exact remedies advocated by the President have not been adopted."

Taft declared that since the administration has been in power 14 years Mr. Truman "admits that it has utterly failed in its much vaunted programs to improve housing, education and health."

He said the generator will develop 2,500 watts which is sufficient to supply the operating room, but not enough for all motors, fans and lights.

The chief said he pulled the main city switch to the hospital and plugged in with the portable generator.

Few other inconveniences were reported. Some motorists passing through the city had a chance to get a good look at the "roundtown" when service stations were unable to pump needed fuel.

This edition of The Circleville Herald was reduced in size as the result of the shutoff. Metal pots and machinery, all dependent upon electricity, were idled, thus cutting down available production time before the regular presstime.

MANY JUMPED into the sea or were hurled overboard when the vessel lurched before the final survivor.

One survivor told how he was awakened by water pouring into his cabin. He ran to the deck and jumped overboard only a moment before the ship dropped over on its side on its downward plunge.

An officer of a tanker which went to the rescue along with other vessels said the scores of survivors were clinging desperately to the smokestack and the ship's masts.

Another survivor said that immediately after the explosion all lights on the steamer went out, ramping the passengers in their desperate scramble for safety.

Rough seas interfered with rescue efforts, especially when persons aboard small craft which were rushed to the scene attempted to grasp survivors clinging to wreckage.

hour and 25 minutes, he reported, supplying current to the hospital.

He said the generator will develop 2,500 watts which is sufficient to supply the operating room, but not enough for all motors, fans and lights.

The chief said he pulled the main city switch to the hospital and plugged in with the portable generator.

Few other inconveniences were reported. Some motorists passing through the city had a chance to get a good look at the "roundtown" when service stations were unable to pump needed fuel.

This edition of The Circleville Herald was reduced in size as the result of the shutoff. Metal pots and machinery, all dependent upon electricity, were idled, thus cutting down available production time before the regular presstime.

Local Elks Set For Flag Day

Several Circleville members of BPO Elks lodge are expecting to attend the annual Elk Flag Day ceremonies to be held at 7 p. m. Sunday in Columbus Central high school stadium.

Maj. Gen. C. W. Goble, chairman in charge, said that "in today's contrast of life as an American and the less fortunate elsewhere," the lodge would emphasize the meaning of the U. S. Flag.

Honesty Pays, But Darn Little

CINCINNATI, June 11 — Mrs. Martha Rawlings of Cincinnati's suburban Lockland found $344 and a library card in an old purse lying on a department store counter today.

She dutifully set about finding the owner.

The elderly woman's name on the library card couldn't be found in the city directory so she enlisted police aid.

When found the lady claimed her property and offered a reward which Mrs. Rawlings turned down.

"I didn't expect a reward but when the woman handed me a dollar bill and asked for 50 cents change, it was too much."

mine blast, allowing little opportunity for those aboard to man lifeboats.

MANY JUMPED into the sea or were hurled overboard when the vessel lurched before the final plunge.

One survivor told how he was awakened by water pouring into his cabin. He ran to the deck and jumped overboard only a moment before the ship dropped over on its side on its downward plunge.

An officer of a tanker which went to the rescue along with other vessels said the scores of survivors were clinging desperately to the smokestack and the ship's masts.

Another survivor said that immediately after the explosion all lights on the steamer went out, rampering the passengers in their desperate scramble for safety.

Rough seas interfered with rescue efforts, especially when persons aboard small craft which were rushed to the scene attempted to grasp survivors clinging to wreckage.

TRAINING POLITICIANS

AN INSTITUTE of practical politics under the supervision of a president who has had ten years' experience in administration in Washington is a new project at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware, Ohio.

Simultaneously with his assumption of duty as president of the university, Arthur S. Fleming, former member of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, will become a professor of political science. He will handle his subject somewhat differently than has been the custom heretofore. The institute plan requires that the students understudy precinct committeemen and ward leaders, and earn college credits by interning in government offices in city, state, or nation.

The new president believes that such a course should be tied in with the regular liberal arts courses, in order that, instead of narrowing their field of vision to politics alone, the students will have a broad knowledge of social questions and a background fitting them to cope with them.

There is undoubtedly a definite need for political workers with training such as that outlined in Fleming's program. All branches of government can profit by an influx of energetic young people who have not only the enthusiasm of youth, but also a practical knowledge of political procedure and a background of theory to give them perspective.

BUG BATTLE

IN SEVERAL cities flies and mosquitoes are beginning to wonder what has hit them, and by the end of Summer there will be very few left to wonder. In Cleveland, this results from an energetic campaign being put on by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

With DDT spraying apparatus, aided by scrupulous cleanliness, the battle is now being carried on against breeding places of the predatory insects. City dumps and slaughter houses are among the chief targets for this part of the program, which will end by the middle of June. July 12th will see the start of another assault and August 9th another.

Private citizens will co-operate by spraying garbage cans, compost heaps, pools of stagnant water, and the screens on their houses. Accompanied by plenty of publicity, this campaign is expected to come close to ridding the area of flies and mosquitoes.

Aside from the annoyance caused by these insects, they are proven carriers of disease and filth, and have no place in a modern community.

These Days

Back in the 1944 campaign, Tom Dewey was faced by a dilemma. He had information which would embarrass Franklin D. Roosevelt during a campaign but which also might have been detrimental to the conduct of the war.

It is possible that had he exposed that information to the public view, he might have been elected President of the United States. George Marshall, then chief of staff, was aware that Dewey possessed this information. He sent a colonel to intercept Dewey in Oklahoma, requesting him not to use it in the national interest. Dewey, without making any agreement, accepted the word of the chief of staff on the conduct of the war.

The Japanese Purple Code was the issue—Dewey knew that we had broken it; the Japanese apparently did not. In the end, Dewey said nothing about the conduct of the war and left himself without a major issue—the worst of which we are now beginning to learn.

Again, at the time of Dumbarton Oaks, it was being planned to form an agreement for the Three Powers to rule the world. This Dewey denounced as laying the foundation for future trouble because it would be an unjust peace. At the suggestion of Cordell Hull, then secretary of state, Dewey appointed John Foster Dulles to represent him in working out policies which would be acceptable to both political parties and which would present to the world a united front. The results of these conferences have been called bipartisan foreign policy.

Whenever the bipartisan foreign policy was adhered to by the administration, it served the country well. Dulles and Sen. Arthur Vandenberg had a large voice in determining policy at Dumbarton Oaks, at San Francisco and at other international conferences.

However, in other matters, outside of the international conferences, there has been no bipartisan foreign policy.

The situation then is that in some matters there has been a bipartisan foreign policy, while with regard to others, the administration has acted on its own. Whenever the bipartisan foreign policy was pursued, the discussion and compromises led to a wiser handling of the situation; whenever the administration acted wholly on its own, it permitted itself to improvise, to act politically and to suffer from such confusions as is exemplified by its dancing this way and that on the Palestine question.

Vandenberg has played an important role in this development. He had been one of Mr. Roosevelt's severest critics. He fought for a just peace. He said in 1945:

"I am prepared, by effective international cooperation, to do our full part in charting happier and safer tomorrows. But I am not prepared to guarantee permanently the spoils of an unjust peace. It will not work."

Nobody questions Vandenberg's sincerity. Nobody can doubt that the foreign policy of the United States is a mess of confusion, a chaos beyond understanding. In that chaos, Vandenberg shares that much responsibility: he did not hold the State department rigidly in line. Maybe it could not be done.

BY KAY HAMILTON

When his beloved grandmother died, Paul Andrew Delacourt, as the last of his family, should have inherited a vast fortune, but instead he received a mere five thousand dollars. His grandfather, aware of Paul's secret desire to make his own way in the world, had left the millions to charity. After promising to keep in touch with Bigelow, the family butler who had been his confidant since childhood, Paul set out on his journey. He was so high-spirited that he did not unduly shade the house. Strangely, they did not seem out of proportion, either. In the back, a line of willows outlined the brook at the base of the garden, and a solitary clump of birches stood out against the thicket of trees on the west side. The view of the mountains was from the back of the house, and several times Andrew was on the point of asking for the key, but he restrained himself. After all, what was the use? He had inquired the price of the place at once, and had had to renounce it. Forty-five hundred. Oh, it was a bargain, all right, but one that he could not afford. Yet his mind came back to it again and again, and unconsciously he judged all the other houses he saw by comparison with it. He drove into Eph Merwell's filling station late one afternoon, his car all mud splattered, and got out stiffly.

"If anybody else offers me a run-down cow-barn in the middle of a blackberry patch," he said darkly, "I'll tie him up and leave him there himself. . . . And the price?" He sighed, and picked up Joe to tickle him under his chin. "It takes a lot of looking, doesn't it?" Eph said sympathetically. "What I mind is the waste of time on a lot of places which don't even begin to meet my requirements," Andrew commented gloomily. "I'm wondering now if I'll ever find what I'm after—and I'll have to, soon."

"Money running out?" "You said it. And none coming in. I've got to get started." "Well, no need to get discouraged," Eph said with a grin. "If at first you don't succeed, do it now." Andrew looked up, startled, but he was getting used to Eph's habit of mixing up saws and sayings. "Ephemerisms," Mrs. Potts called them, with a sniff. She had little use for Eph Merwell, Andrew remembered.

"I'd do it now" if I could," he said. "I'd buy that Wheeler place if I could possibly swing it. It's the only one I really like, and I can see it done over, and being lived in. . . . His voice trailed off. Then he straightened. "But what's the use? I can't afford it, and that's that." Eph looked at him in surprise. "What do you mean, you can't afford it? It's only forty-five hundred. Why, it's a bargain!" "For somebody, but not for me. I couldn't put out a penny more than thirty-two hundred for it. Besides, it's got more land than I want."

"Well, why didn't you say so in the beginning?" Eph sounded annoyed, and Andrew glanced up at him questioning. "Old man Wheeler was a cousin of mine, and happen to know that the Estabrooks want more land—they're the people on the west side—maybe it could be arranged."

Andrew's breath came faster. "You mean, you think we could make a dicker?" "Sure. Why not? You want less land, they want more; you want less price, and that'd help." He moved toward the shack for his cap. "I'll go next door and 'phone right now," he said. "Make hay while the needle's in the haystack is my motto!"

Andrew went with him and stood beside him, nervously jingling the change in his pocket. If he could get that place, it would be just what he wanted! "Listen, Eph," Eph was saying into the phone, "do the Estabrooks still want that piece of land off'n the Wheeler farm? They do? What do you think they'd pay for it? Is that all?" Andrew's heart sank kind—make it in haste and spend it in leisure. Well, we're giving them a chance to spend it."

Caution suddenly overtook Andrew. "Of course," he said with some hesitation, "I haven't even looked at the house yet. And I'd have to have the soil tested. And—"

"Oh, you'll like it," Eph said confidently. And that, apparently, was that, as far as he was concerned.

In a fever of excitement, Andrew got the key to the Wheeler house from the agent, and went out there early the next morning. He walked through it in an architectural trance. The sun was streaming into the old-fashioned kitchen and the dining room. On the left or west side of the entrance hall was a small parlor, and—in the back—a rather large bedroom and bath. The bedroom had a fireplace in it and from that room one entered, surprisingly, the attached barn. This arrangement intrigued Andrew. He would have expected the barn to adjoin the kitchen side of the house, and he made a note to ask Eph about it. But it suited his nebulous plans perfectly as it was.

The barn measured roughly twenty by thirty feet. Andrew took out his pocket-knife and tested the wood in several places. It was in excellent condition. Excited now, he climbed the stairs to the two long rooms above with their small windows near the floor in the front of the house and larger windows at the ends. Plenty of room for a bath, he decided.

Beverly Paterno

NEW YORK—In preparation for writing a little something about a lush blonde named Beverly Paterno, I dug into a sheaf of newspaper clippings a half-foot thick, but I have a simple mind and the task was too stern. I fell off going around the corner of one of her engagements or marriages.

The reason for my interest in Beverly is that she once was married to young Joe Paterno, whose father built the apartment house in which I live, and this always has given me a nice little bit of small talk to throw into the conversation whenever her name may come up.

"Oh, yes, BEVERLY PATERNO," I will say. "Well, let me tell you about that kid. Her one-time father-in-law. . . ." and then I tell my little piece and even if everyone is disappointed, having expected a tidy item of gossip, such as, say, I once was in love with Beverly and asked her to run away to the South Seas with me, it fills up the time between the regular visits of the man carrying the tray full of Martinis.

Miss Paterno is once again in the limelight in Manhattan, although this time, in the words of Jerry Lewis, it's "for real," because nightly she is standing in front of a microphone at Coq Rouge and singing. This is not entirely a new dodge with Miss P., because once she did the same thing at Armando's, but I got around to seeing her for the first time last night.

Beverly's not much of a singer, possibly because she hasn't much of a voice, but she can keep time pretty well and she is nice to look at, and thus she, too, fills up the time between visits of the men with the Martinis.

When she eloped with Joe Paterno in 1936 she said she was 17, so I guess that makes her 29. Between shows, she sits at tables in Coq Rouge with friends, and all in all I guess she is leading pretty much the kind of life she likes. She enjoys singing and she evidently does on night clubs, and here she is combining the two of them and not having to pay the check.

Around the time that Beverly was involved in a divorce suit with Paterno (her maiden name was Parker), Tommy Manville came out and said he was engaged to Beverly, which set something of a mark for the course, since she still was married.

Thomas said he had given her a car for her birthday and declared "It's the real thing this time," but after a while he withdrew the offer and married, in the fine phrase of one newspaperman at the time, a couple of other girls.

I don't know what his score is, now. Something like eight, isn't it? Later on in Beverly's career—somewhere early in the Forties—she married and divorced the social A. Putnam Humphreys.

Humphreys' former wife, Alice, went around with Manville for a while, and it was reported that Beverly had called Tommy "to say a few good words on Alice's behalf" and . . . well, that's where I fell off. Miss Paterno is at Coq Rouge. Two shows nightly. My advice is just to listen to her and not to meditate on her past life.

THE SINGING IMPROVED AFTER LEAVING COQ ROUGE. Miss Nan Wynn, an old love, was at the Blue Angel. She is a little dark-eyed thing who was Miss Rita Hayworth's voice in the movies at one time, but who is known in hot music circles for some peachy and keen records she made some years ago with Teddy Wilson's band, most notably "You Go to My Head."

In those days she made coffee and cake money, but she was a mighty fine singer. At the Blue Angel she has tricked things up, with gestures, back-turnings, winks and everything but standing on her head.

She does all this subtly and skillfully, even keeping the over-indebted souls quiet with her showmanship. The voice still is good, but you contemplate sadly that a voice is not enough. Lena Horne and Evelyn Knight are similar cases in point; they never got into the Big Dough until they added tricks, ranging from the slow waltz to a double half-gainer off the high board, to their repertoire.

Later, in Miss Wynn's dressing room, she relaxed over a cigaret and explained what it was like to sing in a night club. "I won't say you're not conscious of your audience," she said, "but that's not the most important thing. The most important thing is the song."

"You know how you want to sing it, and you concentrate on it to the exclusion of almost everything else. You stand there and put everything into it that you've worked over, and then you cross your fingers and hope it's good."

In Miss Wynn's case, it's good. She would seem a fine, lusty bet for a musical comedy. The musicals along Broadway currently are full of young leading ladies who sing only passably well and are pretty homely.

Last night, the customers at the Blue Angel included Barney Strauss, who produced "For Love or Money," the June Lockhart play, this season. Well, Mr. Strauss—what are you waiting for? Put this kid in a show, and you're in clover. I'll take the tout's customary 5 per cent.

MOUNTS IN MINUTES

Has rigid mounting on same rear axle brackets as used for cultivator—easy to switch from one to the other. Light to handle, yet extra sturdy. Thick rubber bushings in pinman support absorb vibration, spare mower and tractor from wear and tear.

HYDRAULIC LIFT

A touch of the hydraulic control raises or lowers cutterbar to make turns or clear obstacles. Safety release lets bar swing back if it hits something solid; relocks automatically by backing tractor. Balance spring carries most of cutterbar weight, reduces ground drag.

TRAINING POLITICIANS

AN INSTITUTE of practical politics under the supervision of a president who has had ten years' experience in administration in Washington is a new project at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware, Ohio.

Simultaneously with his assumption of duty as president of the university, Arthur S. Fleming, former member of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, will become a professor of political science. He will handle his subject somewhat differently than has been the custom heretofore. The institute plan requires that the students undertake precinct committeemen and ward leaders, and earn college credits by interning in government offices in city, state, or nation.

The new president believes that such a course should be tied in with the regular liberal arts courses, in order that, instead of narrowing their field of vision to politics alone, the students will have a broad knowledge of social questions and a background fitting them to cope with them.

There is undoubtedly a definite need for political workers with training such as that outlined in Fleming's program. All branches of government can profit by an influx of energetic young people who have not only the enthusiasm of youth, but also a practical knowledge of political procedure and a background of theory to give them perspective.

BUG BATTLE

IN SEVERAL cities flies and mosquitoes are beginning to wonder what has hit them, and by the end of Summer there will be very few left to wonder. In Cleveland, this results from an energetic campaign being put on by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

With DDT spraying apparatus, aided by scrupulous cleanliness, the battle is now being carried on against breeding places of the predatory insects. City dumps and slaughter houses are among the chief targets for this part of the program, which will end by the middle of June. July 12th will see the start of another assault and August 9th another.

Private citizens will co-operate by spraying garbage cans, compost heaps, pools of stagnant water, and the screens on their houses. Accompanied by plenty of publicity, this campaign is expected to come close to ridding the area of flies and mosquitoes.

Aside from the annoyance caused by these insects, they are proven carriers of disease and filth, and have no place in a modern community.

These Days

Back in the 1944 campaign, Tom Dewey was faced by a dilemma. He had information which would embarrass Franklin D. Roosevelt during a campaign but which also might have been detrimental to the conduct of the war.

It is possible that had he exposed that information to the public view, he might have been elected President of the United States. George Marshall, then chief of staff, was aware that Dewey possessed this information. He sent a colonel to intercept Dewey in Oklahoma, requesting him not to use it in the national interest. Dewey, without making any agreement, accepted the word of the chief of staff on the conduct of the war.

The Japanese Purple Code was the issue—Dewey knew that we had broken it; the Japanese apparently did not. In the end, Dewey said nothing about the conduct of the war and left himself without a major issue—the worst of which we are now beginning to learn.

Again, at the time of Dumbarton Oaks, it was being planned to form an agreement for the Three Powers to rule the world. This Dewey denounced as laying the foundation for future trouble because it would be an unjust peace. At the suggestion of Cordell Hull, then secretary of state, Dewey appointed John Foster Dulles to represent him in working out policies which would be acceptable to both political parties and which would present to the world a united front. The results of these conferences have been called bipartisan foreign policy.

Whenever the bipartisan foreign policy was adhered to by the administration, it served the country well. Dulles and Sen. Arthur Vandenberg had a large voice in determining policy at Dumbarton Oaks, at San Francisco and at other international conferences.

However, in other matters, outside of the international conferences, there has been no bipartisan foreign policy.

The situation then is that in some matters there has been a bipartisan foreign policy, while with regard to others, the administration has acted on its own. Whenever the bipartisan foreign policy was pursued, the discussion and compromises led to a wiser handling of the situation; whenever the administration acted wholly on its own, it permitted itself to improvise, to act politically and to suffer from such confusions as is exemplified by its dancing this way and that on the Palestine question.

Vandenberg has played an important role in this development. He had been one of Mr. Roosevelt's severest critics. He fought for a just peace. He said in 1945:

"I am prepared, by effective international cooperation, to do our full part in charting happier and safer tomorrows. But I am not prepared to guarantee permanently the spoils of an unjust peace. It will not work."

Nobody questions Vandenberg's sincerity. Nobody can doubt that the foreign policy of the United States is a mess of confusion, a chaos beyond understanding. In that chaos, Vandenberg shares that much responsibility: he did not hold the State department rigidly in line. Maybe it could not be done.

SYNOPSIS

When his beloved, grandmother died, Paul Andrew Delacourt, as the last of his family, should have inherited a vast fortune, but instead he received a mere five thousand dollars. His grandfather, aware of Paul's secret desire to make his own way in the world, left his millions to charity. After promising to keep in touch with Bigelow, the family butler who had been his confidant since childhood, Paul set forth, vowing to settle down wherever his fifteenth birthday took him. Thus he came to the small New England town of Branford, and as Andrew Paulson, architect, secured lodgings at the modest home of Mrs. Potts, who with her teenage daughter Gloria, lived on the outskirts of town. Later, while lunching at The Lodge, Branford's only hotel, he came to the aid of attractive Joan McClure when she turned her ankle. From her employer, Alec Priest, owner of the lumberyard, he learned that Louis Baron, hard-driving contractor, might have used of an architect. Baron, however, proved so insulting that the interview ended in a fight. Andrew, discouraged about finding employment, discussed the idea of buying a farm with Mrs. Potts and Bigelow, who had arrived that afternoon with Andrew's looking car suspiciously, but Andrew explained he had purchased it second-hand and the following day drove her and Gloria to church in it. Joan and her sister were there and agreed to be his dates at the Party given by the church in honor of the next week. When they arrived home Mrs. Potts insisted on "Mr. Bigelow" and Andrew, staying for dinner, after which "Bigelow" left for the city.

CHAPTER TWELVE

FOR THE next ten days Andrew looked at houses. Houses on the highway, houses lost in the hills, houses that were sturdily built and houses that were practically ruins. There was always something wrong with them, however. Sometimes it was the lines; he would stand with his head cocked on one side, studying the place and figuring roughly what it would cost to make it presentable. Sometimes it was the location: a long rutted road which led into a small clearing. No view, no beauty, not even a practical reason, that he could see, for the seclusion.

Most often it was the price. He had not been extravagant in any sense since coming to Branford but it was surprising, and even a little terrifying, to see how his money was shrinking. With what he had left he knew he would have to buy a place, perhaps do some remodeling, invest in tools and materials to start farming, and still have enough to remain at Mrs. Potts' and eat his meals out, until he could move in. There were many evenings when he sat at the small oak table and figured endlessly.

Mrs. Potts was full of suggestions, but few of them were practical. The local real estate men were small help—they gave him a list of places, most of which were too high priced, and though he explained that he could not afford them, he knew they did not believe him. He began to wish he had not sent for the car, if this was the effect it had on people, but it was the only car he owned, and he had to have one to get around.

There was one house which had always attracted him. It was on the East Branford road not more than a mile from the Potts place. It was a small house with attached barn. Old, but not too old. Andrew thought it had probably been built in the eighteen forties.

The lines were excellent and would need little improvement. There was a large shed on the property, and a few gnarled and neglected fruit trees. And the setting was superb. Two large fir trees stood at the front, but they were so high that they did not unduly shade the house. Strangely, they did not seem out of proportion, either. In the back, a line of willows outlined the brook at the base of the garden, and a solitary clump of birches stood out against the thicket of trees on the west side. The view of the mountains was from the back of the house, and several times Andrew was on the point of asking for the key, but he restrained himself. After all, what was the use? He had inquired the price of the place at once, and had had to renounce it.

Forty-five hundred. Oh, it was a bargain, all right, but one that he could not afford. Yet his mind came back to it again and again, and unconsciously he judged all the other houses he saw by comparison with it. He drove into Eph Merwell's filling station late one afternoon, his car all mud splattered, and got out stiffly.

"If anybody else offers me a run-down cow-barn in the middle of a blackberry patch," he said darkly, "I'll tie him up and leave him there himself. And the prices!" He sighed, and picked up Joe to tickle him under his chin. "It takes a lot of looking, don't it?" Eph said sympathetically.

"What I mind is the waste of time on a lot of places which don't even begin to meet my requirements," Andrew commented gloomily. "I'm wondering now if I'll ever find what I'm after—and I'll have to, soon."

"Money running out?" "You said it. And none coming in. I've got to get started." "Well, no need to get discouraged," Eph said with a grin. "If at first you don't succeed, do it now."

Andrew looked up, startled, but he was getting used to Eph's habit of mixing up saws and sayings. "Ephemerisms," Mrs. Potts called them, with a sniff. She had little use for Eph Merwell, Andrew remembered.

"I'd do it now if I could," he said. "I'd buy that Wheeler place if I could possibly swing it. It's the only one I really like, and I can see it done over, and being lived in . . ." His voice trailed off. Then he straightened.

"But what's the use? I can't afford it, and that's that." Eph looked at him in surprise.

"What do you mean, you can't afford it? It's only forty-five hundred. Why, it's a bargain!" "For somebody, but not for me. I couldn't put out a penny more than thirty-two hundred for it. Besides, it's got more land than I want."

"Well, why didn't you say so in the beginning?" Eph sounded annoyed, and Andrew glanced up at him questioning. "Old man Wheeler was a cousin of mine, and I happen to know that the Estabrooks want more land—they're the people on the west side—maybe it could be arranged."

Andrew's breath came faster. "You mean, you think we could make a dicker?"

"Sure. Why not? You want less land, they want more; you want less price, and that'd help." He moved toward the shack for his cap. "I'll go next door and 'phone right now," he said. "Make hay while the needle's in the haystack is my motto!"

Andrew went with him and stood beside him, nervously jingling the change in his pocket. If he could get that place, it would be just what he wanted! "Listen, Lije," Eph was saying into the phone, "do the Estabrooks still want that piece of land off'n the Wheeler farm? They do? What do you think they'd pay for it? Is that all?" Andrew's heart sank and he stood motionless. "Catch them selling that much land off'n their place for that! Tell 'em they c'n have it—mebbe—but they'll have to up their price."

He turned away from the phone. "No go?" Andrew asked, trying to keep the disconsolate note from his voice.

"Sure it's a go!" Eph said heartily. "Course it ain't settled yet, but it will be. They'll pay, and pay plenty—they're summer folks and have plenty. You know the kind—make it in haste and spend it in leisure. Well, we're giving them a chance to spend it."

Caution suddenly overtook Andrew. "Of course," he said with some hesitation, "I-I haven't even looked at the house yet. And I'd have to have the soil tested. And—"

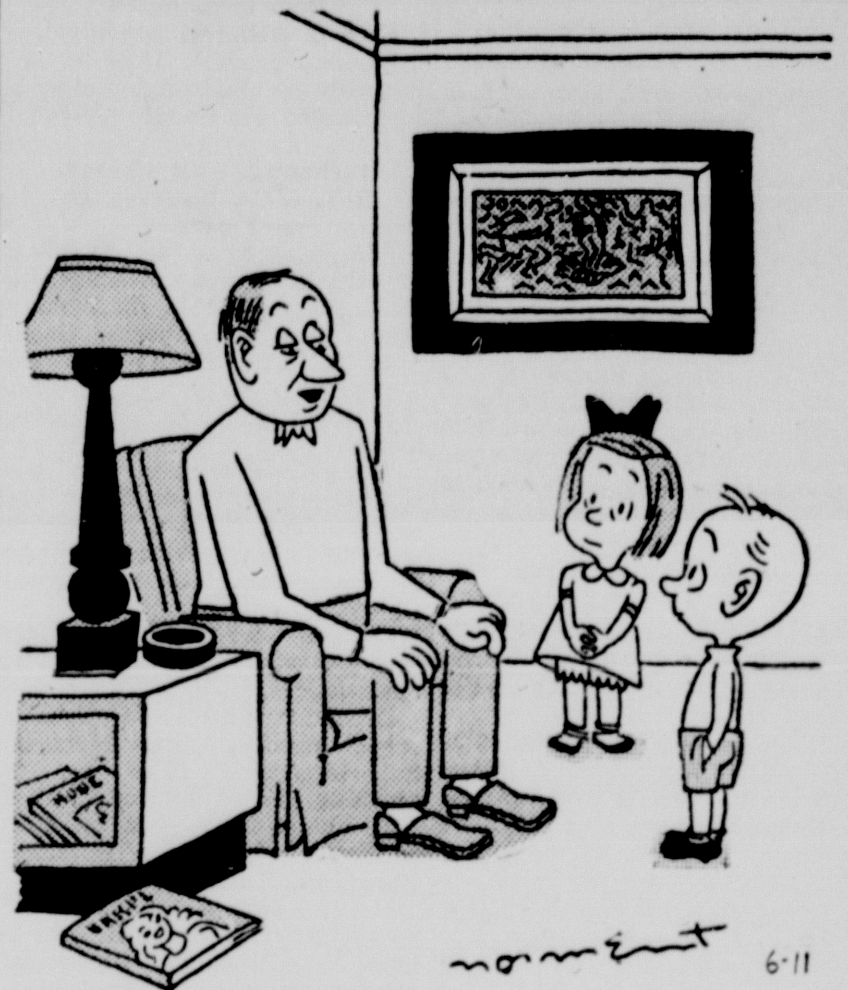

"Oh, you'll like it," Eph said confidently. And that, apparently, was that, as far as he was concerned.

In a fever of excitement, Andrew got the key to the Wheeler house from the agent, and went out there early the next morning. He walked through it in an architectural, trained eye, and was streaming into the old-fashioned kitchen and the dining room. On the left or west side of the entrance hall was a small parlor, and—in the back—a rather large bedroom and bath. The bedroom had a fireplace in it and from that room one entered, surprisingly, the attached barn. This arrangement intrigued Andrew. He would have expected the barn to adjoin the kitchen side of the house, and he made a note to ask Eph about it. But it suited his nebulous plans perfectly as it was.

The barn measured roughly twenty by thirty feet. Andrew took out his pocket-knife and tested the wood in several places. It was in excellent condition. Excited now, he climbed the stairs to the two long rooms above with their small windows near the floor in the front of the house and larger windows at the ends. Plenty of room for a bath, he decided.

Beverly Paterno

NEW YORK—In preparation for writing a little something about a lush blonde named Beverly Paterno, I dug into a sheaf of newspaper clippings a half-foot thick, but I have a simple mind and the task was too stern. I fell off going around the corner of one of her engagements or marriages.

The reason for my interest in Beverly is that she once was married to young Joe Paterno, whose father built the apartment house in which I live, and this always has given me a nice little bit of small talk to throw into the conversation whenever her name may come up.

"Oh, yes, Beverly PATERNO," I will say. "Well, let me tell you about that kid. Her one-time father-in-law . . ." and then I tell my little piece and even if everyone is disappointed, having expected a tidy item of gossip, such as, say, I once was in love with Beverly and asked her to run away to the South Seas with me, it fills up the time between the regular visits of the man carrying the tray full of Martinis.

Miss Paterno is once again in the limelight in Manhattan, although this time, in the words of Jerry Lewis, it's "for real," because nightly she is standing in front of a microphone at Coq Rouge and singing. This is not entirely a new dodge with Miss P., because once she did the same thing at Armando's, but I got around to seeing her for the first time last night.

Beverly is not much of a singer, possibly because she hasn't much of a voice, but she can keep time pretty well and she is nice to look at, and thus she, too, fills up the time between visits of the men with the Martinis.

When she eloped with Joe Paterno in 1936 she said she was 17, so I guess that makes her 29. Between shows, she sits at tables in Coq Rouge with friends, and all in all I guess she is leading pretty much the kind of life she likes. She enjoys singing and she evidently does on night clubs, and here she is combining the two of them and not having to pay the check.

Around the time that Beverly was involved in a divorce suit with Paterno (her maiden name was Parker), Tommy Manville came out and said he was engaged to Beverly, which set something of a mark for the course, since she still was married.

Thomas said he had given her a car for her birthday and declared "It's the real thing this time," but after a while he withdrew the offer and married, in the fine phrase of one newspaperman at the time, a couple of other girls.

I don't know what his score is, now. Something like eight, isn't it? Later on in Beverly's career—somewhere early in the Forties—she married and divorced the social A. Putnam Humphreys.

Humphreys' former wife, Alice, went around with Manville for a while, and it was reported that Beverly had called Tommy "to say a few good words on Alice's behalf" and . . . well, that's where I fell off. Miss Paterno is at Coq Rouge. Two shows nightly. My advice is just to listen to her and not to meditate on her past life.

THE SINGING IMPROVED AFTER LEAVING COQ ROUGE. Miss Nan Wynn, an old love, was at the Blue Angel. She is a little dark-eyed thing who was Miss Rita Hayworth's voice in the movies at one time, but who is known in hot music circles for some peachy and keen records she made some years ago with Teddy Wilson's band, most notably "You Go to My Head."

In those days she made coffee and cake money, but she was a mighty fine singer. At the Blue Angel she has tricked things up, with gestures, back-turnings, winks and everything but standing on her head.

She does all this subtly and skillfully, even keeping the over-inebriated souls quiet with her showmanship. The voice still is good, but you contemplate sadly that a voice is not enough. Lena Horne and Evelyn Knight are similar cases in point; they never got into the Big Dough until they added tricks, ranging from the slow wink to a double half-gainer off the high board, to their repertoire.

Later, in Miss Wynn's dressing room, she relaxed over a cigaret and explained what it was like to sing in a night club. "I won't say you're not conscious of your audience," she said, "but that's not the most important thing. The most important thing is the song."

"You know how you want to sing it, and you concentrate on it to the exclusion of almost everything else. You stand there and put everything into it that you've worked over, and then you cross your fingers and hope it's good."

In Miss Wynn's case, it's good. She would seem a fine, lusty bet for a musical comedy. The musicals along Broadway currently are full of young leading ladies who sing only passably well and are pretty homey.

Last night, the customers at the Blue Angel included Barney Strauss, who produced "For Love or Money," the June Lockhart play, this season. Well, Mr. Strauss—what are you waiting for? Put this kid in a show, and you're in clover. I'll take the tout's customary 5 per cent.

COLUMBUS LADY LOSES 40 LBS. WITH THIS HOME RECIPE

Mrs. R. Flood, 615 Edward St., loses weight without dieting.

"Before I started taking Renell I weighed over 200 pounds and was very uncomfortable. I have not followed a diet. I have eaten whatever I wanted to yet Renell has helped me to lose 40 pounds. My friends are all talking about how much weight I have lost. I am going to continue taking Renell until I have regained my normal weight."

Hundreds of others have obtained similar relief from the social and physical discomforts of being overweight. Renell is the original grapefruit juice recipe for taking off ugly fat. It's simple. Just go to your drugist and ask for 4 ounces of liquid Renell. Pour the contents into a pint bottle—add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle, then take just two tablespoons twice a day. That's all there is to it. If the very first bottle doesn't show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender, more graceful curves—if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't just seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles; just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. You need never know a hungry moment while taking Renell—no starvation diet—no printed diet list to buy—no vitamins to fortify you against weakness while going hungry, for you WON'T be hungry. Don't be switched to another product. Insist upon and obtain genuine Renell.

COLUMBUS LADY LOSES 40 LBS. WITH THIS HOME RECIPE

Mrs. R. Flood, 615 Edward St., loses weight without dieting.

"Before I started taking Rennel I weighed over 200 pounds and was very uncomfortable. I have not followed a diet. I have eaten whatever I wanted to, yet Rennel has helped me to lose 40 pounds. My friends are all talking about how much weight I have lost. I am going to continue taking Rennel until I have regained my normal weight." Hundreds of others have obtained similar relief from the social and physical discomforts of being overweight. Rennel is the original grapefruit juice recipe for taking off ugly fat. It's simple. Just go to your drugist and ask for 4 ounces of liquid Rennel. Pour the contents into a pint bottle—add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle, then take just two tablespoonful twice a day. That's all there is to it. If the very first bottle doesn't show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender, more graceful curves—if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't just seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles; just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. You need never know a hungry moment while taking Rennel—no starvation diet—no printed diet list to buy—no vitamins to fortify you against weakness while going hungry, for you WON'T be hungry. Don't be switched to another product. Insist upon and obtain genuine Rennel.

Connie Mack's '9' Snaps Loss Streak

NEW YORK, June 11—The four-game series between the Cleveland Indians and the New York Yankees, which gets under way at Yankee Stadium tonight, may go a long way toward deciding this year's American League pennant winner.

The Yankees, who were a slight favorite over Boston in pre-season pennant predictions, are in second place, three games behind Cleveland.

The Indians were knocked over yesterday by the improved Boston Red Sox, 15 to 7. In the third inning, the Sox enjoyed their biggest frame of the year. They sent 13 men to bat and scored eight runs. Bobby Doerr's three-run homer highlighted the rally.

This foray enabled Rapid Robert Feller to take a rapid shower. The winning hurler was Joe Dobson, who racked up his seventh triumph of the season. Two of them have been against Cleveland.

Connie Mack's Athletics snapped their five-game losing streak by swamping Detroit, 10 to 4, with a seven-run rally in the fourth inning.

DETROIT produced four alleged pitchers who issued a total of seven bases on balls.

Another Santa Claus in pitcher's clothing popped up in Washington last night when Frank Biscan of the Browns threw four straight balls to Mark Christman of the Senators with the bases full in the ninth inning. As a result, Washington won the ball game, 5 to 4.

Russ Meyer, who probably is the best pitcher on the payroll of the Chicago Cubs, held the New York Giants to seven hits and beat them 6 to 4, as Bobo Newsom, the travelling man, failed the New Yorkers again.

Johnny Sain, the former Army pilot who now toils for the Boston Braves, had his bomb sight working perfectly as he beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 10 to 2.

The Braves, who now are only half a game behind the pace-setting Giants took second place away from the Cards, who dropped into a tie with Pittsburgh for third place.

The Pirates, in a night game, beat Brooklyn 4 to 1 when Ernie Bonham, formerly of the New York Yankees, held the Dodgers to two hits.

Tinker Pitcher Bill Elliott Gives Bases-Loaded Walks; Isalys Win

Isalys softball team is tied with the Mumaw team for leadership in Circleville Night Softball League after its 4-3 win over Tinks at Ted Lewis Park Thursday night. Both league leaders have won three and lost one in four starts.

The Isaly team was given the one run margin in the sixth inning when, with the bases full and the score tied at 3 all, Tink pitcher Bill Elliott walked in the winning tally. Elliott had pulled the same faux pas earlier in the game.

Isalys opened with three runs in the first inning on two hits, a passed ball and a man hit by a pitched ball. The first of the three first inning runs was walked in by the generous Elliott, while the other two scored on a single by Junior Anderson.

In Tinks' half of the first inning, Isaly Pitcher Kenny Reid walked three and gave up a hit to allow one run for the Tinkers.

AN INEPT LOT OF HELPERS

Zale's Left Hook Puts Rock Horizontal On Mat

NEWARK, N. J., June 11—A whistling left hook to the jaw after 68 seconds of the third round had elapsed stretched Rocky Graziano on his back in the Newark ball park last night.

And so today Tony Zale is once again the world's middle-weight champion, a title he lost last year to the tough lad from New York's lower east side.

Today Zale is looking forward to an outdoor September fight with Marcel Cerdan, the Frenchman, or Sugar Ray Robinson, the welterweight boss who is outgrowing the division.

Both fighters agree that the first left hook Tony landed on Rocky's jaw actually won the fight. Zale insists that he knew then that it was only a question of time until he stiffened Rocky for keeps.

Strangely enough, Rocky holds the same viewpoint. That punch dropped him to the canvas but he bounced up without a count. Asked why, Rocky admitted he didn't know what he was doing.

ROCKY WAS doomed to lose the fight no matter how he fought. But he made doubly sure to lose it when he elected to try to box with a man who has forgot more about boxing than he will ever learn.

Rocky's handlers — and an inept lot they were — kept shouting "stick him with the left, Rocky." Rocky dutifully followed instructions.

But every time he jabbed with the left, he dropped his right hand. And every time that right dropped Zale nailed him with a left hook.

Zale's timing was perfect. His boxing was neat and his hitting terrific.

He opened hostilities by shooting a left and right to head and body, short damaging punches that hurt. Rocky managed to get in a hard left and right on his own account and then Tony came through with a left hook to the jaw that dropped Rocky.

He bounced up immediately only to run into a shower of right and left hooks to body and head that had Rocky weaving on the ropes at the bell.

THE SECOND round had hardly begun before Zale had Rocky staggering again and once more it was those same deadly short hooks that caused all the damage. Rocky seemed to have no defense for them.

As he said later, he had nothing left after that first punch he took in the first round. He was taking a pounding on the ropes when suddenly he rallied and drove Tony back with a fusillade of lefts and rights.

Many of these punches were wild and Tony either rode with or blocked others. But enough landed to make the crowd believe Rocky was going to turn the tide. They were still slugging after the bell.

The third round was the payoff. A left hook to the jaw dropped Rocky again and he took a five count. He was groggy when he arose and then came that beautiful left to the jaw and Rocky went down and out on his back while the timekeeper tolled a dirge to his life hopes.

However, he has $120,000 to solace his wounds today and Zale has $60,000 with the promise of more and bigger gates to come.

Mixed Event Set At Golf Course
Two-ball mixed foresomes have been scheduled for play Sunday at Pickaway Country Club golf course.

The handicap event, covering nine holes, will call for each man to bring a woman partner with him. Then names will be drawn to determine pairings.

Selective drives will be observed with choice of the better ball after the drive from tee.

Eddy Amey, manager of the club, said Friday that six couples already had signed up for the event. Prizes in golf balls will be given the two best scorers, he said.

Lockbourne Men Favored In Test
COLUMBUS, June 11—A trip to the U. S. Olympic trials is the goal of Air Force athletes, who convene at Columbus West high school today and tomorrow in the USAF's eastern area trials.

Lockbourne Air Base of near here will be one of the favored teams. Lockbourne is spearheaded by Mal Whitfield, who won the Big Nine quarter mile title as a member of the Ohio State university team. Whitfield is a sergeant at Lockbourne.

Ex-Localite Hurt In Softball Tilt
A long fly ball to left field in the Onized-Fabric Club game in the Columbus AA Softball League Thursday caused the probable fracture of a former Circleville man's collar bone.

The man suffering the injury was Fred Keaton, who attended high school here. In addition to the injury to the bone, Keaton witnessed also the first defeat of his Fabric team by a 3-1 margin.

AN INEPT LOT OF HELPERS

Zale's Left Hook Puts Rock Horizontal On Mat

NEWARK, N. J., June 11—A whistling left hook to the jaw after 68 seconds of the third round had elapsed stretched Rocky Graziano on his back in the Newark ball park last night.

And so today Tony Zale is once again the world's middleweight champion, a title he lost last year to the tough lad from New York's lower east side.

Today Zale is looking forward to an outdoor September fight with Marcel Cerdan, the Frenchman, or Sugar Ray Robinson, the welterweight boss who is outgrowing the division.

Both fighters agree that the first left hook Tony landed on Rocky's jaw actually won the fight. Zale insists that he knew then that it was only a question of time until he stiffened Rocky for keeps.

Strangely enough, Rocky holds the same viewpoint. That punch dropped him to the canvas but he bounced up without a count. Asked why, Rocky admitted he didn't know what he was doing.

ROCKY WAS doomed to lose the fight no matter how he fought. But he made doubly sure to lose it when he elected to try to box with a man who has forgotten more about boxing than he will ever learn.

Rocky's handlers—and an inept lot they were—kept shouting "stick him with the left, Rocky." Rocky dutifully followed instructions.

But every time he jabbed with the left, he dropped his right hand. And every time that right dropped Zale nailed him with a left hook.

Zale's timing was perfect, his boxing was neat and his hitting terrific.

He opened hostilities by shooting a left and right to head and body, short damaging punches that hurt. Rocky managed to get in a hard left and right on his own account and then Tony came through with a left hook to the jaw that dropped Rocky.

He bounced up immediately only to run into a shower of right and left hooks to body and head that had Rocky weaving on the ropes at the bell.

THE SECOND round had hardly begun before Zale had Rocky staggering again and once more it was those same deadly short hooks that caused all the damage. Rocky seemed to have no defense for them.

As he said later, he had nothing left after that first punch he took in the first round. He was taking a pounding on the ropes when suddenly he rallied and drove Tony back with a fusillade of lefts and rights.

Many of these punches were wild and Tony either rode with or blocked others. But enough landed to make the crowd believe Rocky was going to turn the tide. They were still slugging after the bell.

The third round was the payoff. A left hook to the jaw dropped Rocky again and he took a five count. He was groggy when he arose and then came that beautiful left to the jaw and Rocky went down and out on his back while the timekeeper tolled a dirge to his little hopes.

However, he has $120,000 to solace his wounds today and Zale has $60,000 with the promise of more and bigger gates to come.

Mixed Event Set At Golf Course

Two-ball mixed foresomes have been scheduled for play Sunday at Pickaway Country Club golf course.

The handicap event, covering nine holes, will call for each man to bring a woman partner with him. Then names will be drawn to determine pairings.

Selective drives will be observed with choice of the better ball after the drive from tee.

Eddy Arney, manager of the club, said Friday that six couples already had signed up for the event. Prizes in golf balls will be given the two best scores, he said.

Lockbourne Men Favored In Test

COLUMBUS, June 11—A trip to the U. S. Olympic trials is the goal of Air Force athletes, who convene at Columbus West high school today and tomorrow in the USAF's eastern area trials.

Ex-Localite Hurt In Softball Tilt

A long fly ball to left field in the Onized-Fabric Club game in the Columbus AA Softball League Thursday caused the probable fracture of a former Circleville man's collar bone.

The man suffering the injury was Fred Keaton, who attended high school here. In addition to the injury to the bone, Keaton witnessed also the first defeat of his Fabric team by a 3-1 margin.

Total County Relief Cost Shows Decline During May

City Share Increases, Aide Says

Number Of Cases Is Lowered

Pickaway County relief expenditures in May slipped nearly $600, but more was paid out to Circleville recipients than the previous month, it was revealed Friday in an April-May comparative report.

Miss Pauline Reese, Pickaway County relief director, said a total $5,346.87 was spent in April compared to $4,947.08 in May.

Of the total spent in April, the city received $1,970.41 and the county, $3,376.46 in relief supplies. May's report showed $1,987.77 was spent on Circleville recipients and $2,909.31 for relief in the county.

Administrative costs in April totaled $319.92 and in May $321.40.

The drop in expenditures was reflected in the decline of case recipients in May compared to April, Miss Reese declared. She said 131 cases were carried in April and 124 in May.

"ACTUALLY," Miss Reese stated, "the May case load figure does not represent an accurate figure because payments in the month included expenses for shoes, clothing and other items encumbered during previous months."

She declared a more accurate figure would be 17 less than reported in May.

Of the April case load figure, 18 was supplementation for aid for aged; and one supplementing aid to blind.

May supplementation showed 24 for aid for aged, one to aid for the blind, and two aid to dependent children cases, Miss Reese pointed out.

The breakdown of April expenses follows:

Food—$2,508.65; hospital—$755.25; medical—$744.26; care—$725.59; rent—$293.50; clothing—$351.84; and fuel—$91.53.

May expenses are:

Food—$1,911.23; medical—$1,133.69; care—$686; hospital—$375.44; clothing—$361.44; rent—$271; and fuel—$83.28.

Move Underway To Maintain Ship As Shrine

CLEVELAND, June 11—A determined move to stop sale of the USS Sable, Great Lakes aircraft carrier in World War II, was underway today by a Cleveland group.

Clarence S. Metcalf, executive vice-president of the Great Lakes Historical Society, said the Sable should be grounded at Put-In-Bay to serve as a breakwater to protect the Commodore Perry monument and to create a national museum for the preservation of historic lake ships.

Metcalf, who also is director of Cleveland public library, said he wrote to Congressman Alvin D. Weichel of Sandusky, chairman of the house merchant marine committee, to halt sale proceedings.

He suggested that the Sable be transferred by the commission to the parks bureau and under the direction of the U. S. Engineers Corps, be set in a concrete foundation for use as a breakwater.
